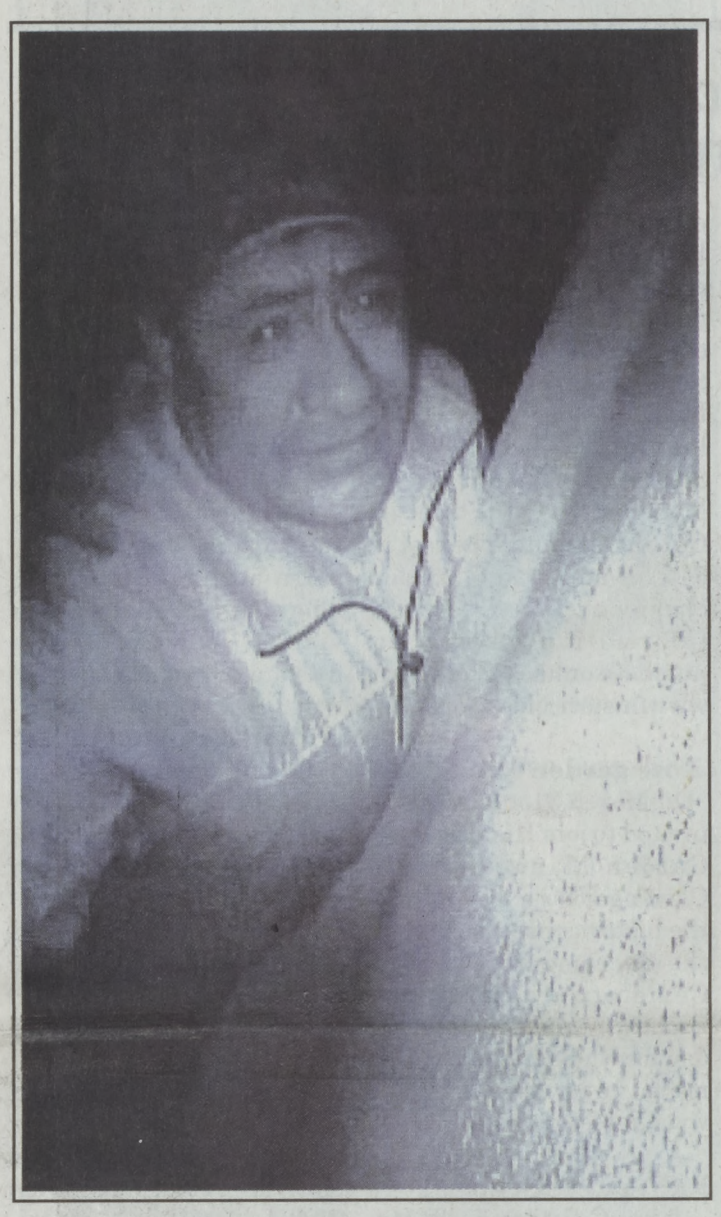
Two incidents of theft/vandalism this month:

Afghan Center offers $1,000 reward in theft



By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The Afghan Community Center under construction on Glide Avenue has been hit by criminals twice this month. It's offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of those responsible for one of those actions.

At about 5:55 a.m. on March 8, two male subjects were seen on video as they stole six video surveillance cameras from the exterior of the building. One was seen fairly clearly as he approached a camera to steal it. He was described by police as a Hispanic male, with a light-colored zip-up jacket, round face and a dark hat. The second suspect is possibly Hispanic, with a goatee, light-colored shorts, light-colored zip-up "hoody," sunglasses and a dark backpack.

The center is offering the $1,000 reward in connection with that theft.

Then, at about 8:33 p.m. last Friday (March 23), the building was targeted another way.

Somebody threw several rocks threw the window of the Islamic facility – while a couple of people prayed inside the mosque, according to one media source. No one was hurt.

The Sacramento office of the Council on American-Islamic Relations (CAIR) issued a press release calling for the FBI and local authorities to investigate a possible "hate crime" motive.

"Whenever a house of worship is targeted in this manner, the possibility of a bias motive must be considered," CAIR's local executive director Basim Elkarra was quoted in a press release.

Lieutenant Tod Sockman of the West Sacramento Police Department told the News-Ledger yesterday that there had been no arrests in either incident.

"We have no positive ID yet," said Sockman. "The thousand-dollar reward has sparked some interest."

TWO SUSPECTS in the March 8 theft approach their target -- security cameras at a Glide Avenue religious facility

The "hate crime" motive will be something for the District Attorney's office to determine after police catch some suspects and gather more information, he added. But the building's religious component is not completely obvious to casual passersby.

"It's a building under construction, and it's not occupied," said Sockman. "There's no big sign outside saying what it's for, and no religious symbols."

Three years ago, someone broke into the group's previous Islamic Center, causing damage.

Anyone with information about these incidents is asked to contact police at 617-4915.

Bats eat bugs -- but also carry a rabies threat

The Animal Services section of the Yolo County Sheriff's office urges the public to be cautious about contact with bats.

While "bats have an important part of our ecosystem, consuming thousands of insects daily," they are also frequent carriers of rabies, reports the department. In 2011, there were ten different cases in which bats that had been in contact with humans or pets in Yolo County tested positive for the deadly disease.

People should make sure their dogs and cats are vaccinated for rabies, and should avoid contact with either live or dead bats.

"Pets often find bats on the ground in gardens, under trees or on walkways, and that encounter can be deadly should the pet not be protected by vaccine," said the sheriff's department.

"Should a colony of bats in or around inhabited buildings become a nuisance, they should only be handled by experienced location experts. Please reference Northern California Bats website at www.norcalbats.org as an educational resource."

For questions, or to report a bat encounter, call the animal services section at (530) 668-5287 or email animal.bite-@yolocounty.org.

March is the beginning of a migratory period for bats in this area.

Wrong-way escape onto freeway, followed by foot chase:

Suspect wanted for felonies after fleeing police

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Police asked for the public's help in locating a felony suspect who fled wrong-way onto a local freeway then fled on foot after getting into a car accident. The incident began at about 7:46 a.m. on Wednesday, reports Sergeant Nathan Steele of the West Sacramento Police Department.

An officer tried to stop a white Ford F150 for a vehicle code violation that morning, but if failed to stop and instead fled eastbound into a westbound lane of I-80. Police called off their chase "for public safety" after about a minute.

Then, the pickup truck exited the freeway and hit another vehicle near Harbor Boulevard and West Capitol Avenue. No one was hurt. The pickup truck driver escaped on foot and was last seen on the 700-block of Glide Avenue. Police launched an "extensive search," but didn't find him, reports Steele.

But a passenger in the pickup, 30-year old Christina Rangel, was taken into custody on several felony charges.

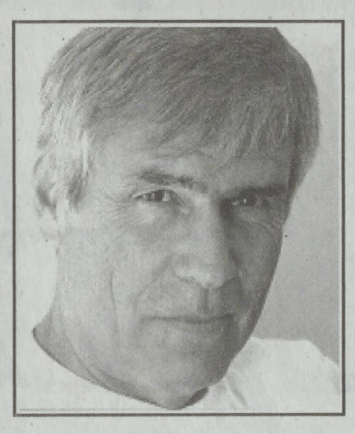
Police identified the at-large suspect as Lino Garcia Jr., 34. Garcia has a felony arrest warrant from Napa County, and is now wanted by West Sacramento police for charges including possession of a stolen vehicle and evading police.

They quickly issued a media alert asking the public to report him if they see him. They described Garcia as 5'5" tall, 200 pounds, Hispanic, with a shaved head.

Anyone with information on his whereabouts is asked to call police dispatchers at 375-6474.

In the end, it's only kindness that matters

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

A few nights ago I was watching one of those cable network news shows and the panel was discussing some of the televised political ads that are currently being aired in many of the states which are holding 2012 presidential primaries. The talking heads on the panel weren't all that interesting, but the actual verbiage and images being used in the ads were. In fact, it was actually pretty disturbing to watch politicians who desperately want to be the President of the United States call each other every name imaginable, and do so in ways that stretch the truth so badly that it is actually nothing less than lying.

After the show was over, I found myself reflecting on why our current political discourse has gotten so nasty and unkind. But since our politicians only reflect the voters they long to impress, the answer must be with us as individuals, and not just with those we choose to lead us. And the more I tried to get my head around such a sad reality, the more I found myself thinking back to Jack Vincent, an elderly little man who used to live right across the street from the house I grew up in on Michigan Boulevard here in West Sacramento.

Jack was a man of great energy for someone his age, or at least it seemed like it because when he walked, he always did so at what was warp speed for him. And the one thing which really set his walk apart was that he was very bow-legged, and the combination of that and the speed he tried to get up to when he was on foot made him very noticeable when he was shuffling from place to place. But as interesting as Jack's way of walking was, the thing which really made him unique – and so memorable to me – was how he always went about interacting with his fellow man. I doubt that Jack's special way of talking to other people was a conscious or calculated thing on his part, but rather just an extension of who he was as a person, and it went something like this:

Whenever Jack would see someone, be they a few feet away from him or way across the street, he would find a way (with a big smile on his face) to pass along a compliment, or just say something nice that, thinking back on it after it had happened to you, would make your day. And it didn't matter if you were young or old, short or tall, skinny or fat, black or white, rich or poor, in fancy clothes or in hand-me-downs, because Jack could always somehow come up with a compliment that seemed to be genuine, more or less accurate, and right from his heart. He seemed determined to always be nice and thoughtful and kind to everyone who crossed his path.

In my particular case (remembering that I was in my early teens at the time), Jack would say such things as, "Now Daryl, that's a great haircut you just got! It makes you look really handsome! Boy, are the girls going to be after you now!" Or, "I wish I could throw a ball up against my garage door the way you do yours! What an arm! I bet someday the New York Yankees are going to be after you!" Or, "I think it's great that you always help your dad with the yardwork! Hard-working young boys like you make me feel good about the future of this great country of ours!"

So when Jack was done with me I usually felt like I could take on the world and that it was only a matter of time before I would be driving the girls crazy and playing shortstop for the New York Yankees! And as time went by, I began to notice that Jack's ability to always be thoughtful and never mean-spirited had the very same effect on others as it did on me. And many was the time I would overhear Jack making someone else's day, and then see them stroll away from him smiling and with a little more spring in their step, all because a little old man who walked funny chose to take a minute or two out of his day to say something kind and nice to a fellow human being.

So, at a relatively early age I learned that if we really want to, we can actually choose to make those around us feel good about themselves, or we can just as easily choose to do the opposite. We can consciously decide to bring out the very best in others, or we can constantly harp on all their week points. We can send people on their way to face another tough day with a smile on their face, or we can weigh them down with ugly words and make them feel heavy.

One of my favorite sayings (although I no longer remember who wrote it and have probably rearranged the words a bit over the years) is: "If there is any kindness I can do, let me do it now, for I shall not pass this way again." For whatever reason, Jack Vincent had decided to live his life that way, and maybe if more of us dedicated ourselves to the same goal, we could actually have ourselves a relatively civil society again, and our politicians and their political consultants wouldn't dare fill our airways with all those hateful words, half-truths and lies.

When Jack was done with me I usually felt like I could take on the world and that it was only a matter of time before I would be driving the girls crazy and playing shortstop for the New York Yankees.

Rotary honors three for their service

West Sacramento's "Centennial Rotary Club" (one of two local Rotary chapters) has presented three of its most active members with Paul Harris Foundation Awards, in honor of their support for the club's work.

Rotary engages in a lot of community projects in West Sacramento.

According to club president-elect Don Schatzel, their contributions have been large and consistent. Treasurer Alan Wegat of Nor Cal Performance has made "huge" contributions keeping the accounts in order, Walt James has been running things as club president, and Buzz Jones of PIP Printing "runs the club" as secretary, commented Schatzel.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

	÷		+		4
+		×		×
	−		×		9
	+		÷		4

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS

Jeremy Irvine in 'War Horse'

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"War Horse" (PG-13) -- This latest offering from Steven Spielberg has all of the visual splendor and classic-style sentimentality expected from the veteran film maker. It starts with an English farm boy named Albert (Jeremy Irvine) being tasked with raising and training a colt racing stallion called Joey. When the two are separated by World War I, the horse braves an odyssey through ravaged Europe, making an impact in the lives of humans wherever he goes.

The bulk of the story stays with the horse. While the majestic creature makes its way through the horrors of war, everything has that classic-movie sheen to it. While we're supposed to feel for the horse, it seems like the mountains of human suffering are being glossed over.

"We Bought a Zoo" (PG) -- Sometimes, you just have to take a big, crazy leap and give it your all. That seems to be the syrupy message at the heart of this based-on-a-true story. Benjamin (Matt Damon) is a let-go newspaper reporter who recently lost his wife. While looking for a new home where he can take his young daughter and teen son, he finds a run-down country estate that also happens to be a run-down zoo in need of new, dedicated owners.

Matt Damon, Scarlett Johansson and Colin Ford (who plays Damon's son) all portray characters more grounded than their script. This story of a wild risk that paid off for one troubled family can be a joyful experience, just make sure any children watching don't get their hopes up.

"Being Elmo: A Puppeteer's Journey" (PG) -- This isn't a typical Elmo DVD-adventure, but it is about a young person with dreams that come true. This documentary follows Kevin Clash, Elmo's puppeteer and voice. The film tells the story of Clash's childhood aspirations to work with Jim Henson, and shows behind-the-scenes footage of Clash and the rest of the Muppets crew.

Looking behind the curtain might seem like it could drain the magic from the Muppets, but it's actually a peek into another dimension of their world. Colorful felt, buggy eyes and clever shots abound. It's a magic trick that's impressive even when you know how it's done. Clash has been making puppets since he was a boy in the suburbs of Baltimore. Learning how Clash worked his way to where he wanted to be makes scrappy little Elmo even more endearing.

"London River" -- In the aftermath of the London Underground bombings in 2005, two people cross paths while sorting through the terror and the tragedy. Elisabeth is a white Christian woman searching for her daughter. After putting up posters, she comes in contact with Ousmane, a black Muslim man from France who found a photograph of his son with her daughter.

The two try to use each other to get to the bottom of what happened. The story and the performances make the film worthwhile, even if the message can seem a bit blunt.

"Pure"
by Julianna Baggott
(Grand Central Publishing, $25.99)
Reviewed by Ealish Waddell

Nine years ago, the Detonations turned civilization to ash. It's the rare creature that wasn't touched by the searing lights, burned, deformed or fused with something -- metal, plastic, the earth at their feet, even other living beings. In this new landscape, man-eating Dusts and Beasts lie in wait for unwary prey, the corrupt military relentlessly prowls the streets for recruits and targets, and fading memories of Before have become treasured currency. Suffering and desperate, the survivors gaze hungrily at the Dome -- the haven of those lucky few who managed to escape the devastation -- and recite like a prayer the long-ago promise, "Help is coming."

But Pressia has no more time to wait. She has turned 16, and now the soldiers are coming for her.

In contrast, Partridge's life under the Dome is highly civilized: lessons, school dances, mandatory gene-altering sessions -- the usual routine. But when a chance remark from his father gives reason for Partridge to hope his long-lost mother might still be alive outside, he resolves to break out and find her. Of course, he is dreadfully misinformed and underprepared for what he will find out there ... but life in the Dome may not have left him so soft as one would believe.

Of course Partridge and Pressia are destined to meet, and when they do, the astonishing secrets they uncover together may just change the future of their world.

The first installment in an intriguing new sci-fi series, "Pure" doesn't stint on the horror of its premise. The pages are filled with uncomfortable, nightmarish imagery as well as flashes of macabre beauty: a boy with birds fluttering in his back, a girl joined forever to the doll she can never outgrow. "Pure" is a powerful vision of a future that is like its denizens, a Frankenstein jumble of the familiar and the unimaginable.

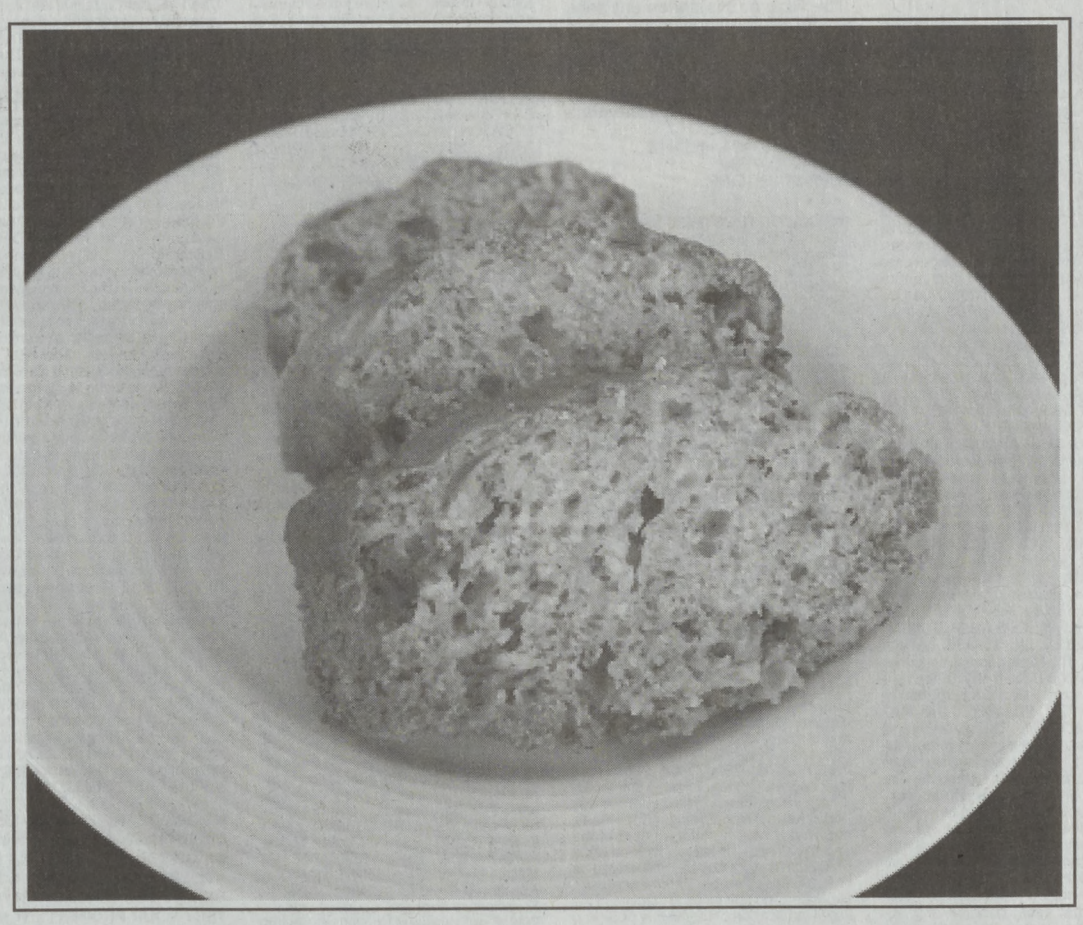
Play Dough



I love the whole retro image of making homemade bread. In my mind's eye, I picture myself in dainty, flour-covered apron taking plump, golden loaves out of the oven. The smell of freshly baked bread perfumes the house, drawing my loving family to the table. Then, I'm snapped back to reality by the realization that I barely have time to sleep at night. Besides, homemade bread takes hours to make -- or does it?

The beautiful thing about a retro recipe is that you can always find a way to make it modern. I love playing with dough, whether it's bread, pizzas or pies. Quick bread recipes allow me to re-create a delicious memory in a modern way.

Quick breads provide the taste and smell of yeast breads in a fraction of the time. Most recipes for quick breads contain a chemical leavening reaction of a base, like baking soda, and an acid such as cream of tartar, lemon juice or buttermilk to produce carbon dioxide. A good-quality baking powder contains an acid and a base and only needs a liquid to activate it. The carbon dioxide that is formed makes the bread rise. It also produces a texture softer and lighter than most yeast breads.

My recipe for Liberian Pineapple Nut Bread is about as retro as you can possibly get! It's an African recipe that I've modernized by adding a healthy dose of wheat bran. Wheat bran contains B vitamins, thiamin, riboflavin and niacin, minerals and fiber to keep things, um, moving. The fiber in the wheat germ helps you to feel full faster, and also absorbs fat and cholesterol before it enters the blood stream. This quick bread is perfect as part of a healthy breakfast or a light snack. Best of all, it's a delicious excuse for those days when you want to play with your food!

LIBERIAN PINEAPPLE NUT BREAD

Turn this quick bread into a "grab and go" breakfast or snack along with a few tablespoons of Eden Foods Organic Apple Butter, Arrowhead Mills Organic Creamy Valencia Peanut Butter or Cascadian Farms Fruit Spreads.

1 cup Bob's Red Mill Wheat Bran
1/2 cup chopped, almonds or walnuts
2 cups King Arthur Flour Organic Artisan All Purpose Flour
1/2 cup Bob's Mills Organic Whole Wheat Pastry Flour
1 tablespoon Bob's Red Mill Non-Aluminum Double Acting Baking Powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 large eggs, lightly beaten
2 cups crushed pineapple with juice
1/2 cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla or fresh lemon juice

1. Preheat the oven to 350 F.
2. Toast the wheat bran and the nuts together in a heavy, dry pan over medium heat for 3 to 5 minutes, stirring occasionally to keep from burning. Set aside to cool.
3. Sift the flours, baking powder, baking soda and salt into a large bowl. Mix in the toasted wheat bran and nuts. Add eggs, pineapple, water and vanilla or lemon juice. Mix together thoroughly. The dough should be moist and well-combined.
4. Scoop batter into a greased loaf pan. Bake for 1 hour, or until a toothpick or tester inserted in the middle of loaf comes out clean. Cool and wrap tightly in food-safe plastic wrap and foil. Loaf can be frozen up to 3 months.
